Hi All,

YEP Summer is here! Hot weather and BOATING YEAH!

Our Wheelhouse (& deck) have become “the place to be” this summer. I’m happy to see that our members are enjoying the facility immensely!

Our monthly board meeting this August 8th will have something “special.” Our new landlord – Mr. Anthony Giardini – will be there to give a short presentation on his plans for the building and to answer some of your questions. I have long advocated allowing Mr. Giardini to follow through on his plans to keep the Westlake Yachting Club on the “new” premises and believe this location will remain the best for us. Let’s listen to him and see if the membership agrees. Please plan on attending.

Captain Bill Robb

Commodore

Vice Commodore – Capt. Tim Brunk

Here we are in the middle of summer and still going strong! I am amazed at all the new faces I am seeing at the Wheelhouse. This could be one of our best seasons ever!

Don’t forget the Pig Roast this Saturday. If you have not already purchased your tickets, see Teri at the Wheelhouse. Those of you that were mailed tickets and are planning on attending please mail your payment or drop it off at the Wheelhouse. If you cannot attend, please return your tickets. This event is one of our best so don’t miss out on the fun!!

It’s time to start getting those silent auction donations ready. Our Clambake and Silent Auction is on September 22nd so you can bring your donations to the Wheelhouse at any time. A big thanks to all of our members for supporting this auction. Clambake tickets will be available soon.

Have You Had a Boat Insurance Checkup?

3 important coverage's boaters sometimes overlook

ALEXANDRIA, Va., June 27, 2018 – For the majority of recreational boaters, a boat insurance claim won't be in their future this summer – but you can never predict when something will happen. Is your boat insurance policy up to snuff? With the boating season just begun, Boat Owners Association of The United States (BoatUS) suggests boaters do a quick “checkup” on their boat's insurance policy to ensure they have three important coverage's.

1. Consequential damage coverage: Big, bad things like sinkings, often happen to boats as a result of some small part below the waterline failing. Think cracked rubber outdrive bellows or broken thru-hulls. Check your policy now to ensure it includes consequential damage coverage that pays for losses that often begin with a failed part that may be excluded under the policy. This means the leaky rubber outdrive bellows or broken thru-hull itself may not be covered, but with consequential damage coverage, the rest of the repairs or total loss – your sunken boat – will be (up to the limits you have selected). One caveat: This consequential damage coverage often applies only to major or total losses. It's typical, for example, to cover the immediate consequential damage resulting from any sinking, fire, explosion, demasting, collision or stranding.

2. Salvage coverage: A windstorm collapses your marina's shed roof onto your boat. You run hard aground and damage the running gear. You are now in a salvage situation: The boat is not a total loss and needs to be recovered and brought to a repair facility. Most boaters assume the cost of removing the boat to a safe location is covered by their insurance policy, but some policies will first subtract salvage costs from the insured value of the boat, reducing the funds available to repair the boat, or the amount paid to the boater in the event of a total loss. Or worse yet, some policies pay only a small percentage of that insured value – perhaps just 5 to 10 percent – to pay for salvage costs, again forcing you to pay more out of pocket. Make sure your policy has salvage coverage that is separate but equal to the limit of your boat's hull-value coverage. For example, a boat with an agreed value of $40,000 should have another separate $40,000 available just for salvage expenses.

3. Hurricane haul out coverage: For boats in hurricane zones, hurricane haul out coverage is a must. This coverage helps a boat owner make the decision to haul his or her boat before the storm as it helps pay a portion of the labor costs to have a boat hauled, prepared and tied-down by professionals, or moved by a licensed captain. While hauling out in preparation for a storm costs the boater some money, it's potentially far less than if the boat sustained damage or became a total loss. The BoatUS Marine Insurance Program pays 50 percent of the cost of labor, up to $1,000, to have the boat hauled or moved to the safety of a hurricane hole, and the haul out does not penalize the policyholder.

If your marine insurer can't help you with these coverage's, the experts at BoatUS can. Get a free quote at BoatUS.com/Insurance or call 800-283-2883.
